Sacred
To the Memory of
John Birch Esquire,
Many years an eminent Surgeon of this Metropolis;
who died on the 3rd of February, 1815, Aged 69 years, and whose earthly remains lie deposited under the Pulpit.

-------------
In his professional Character,
as humane as he was skilful,
He permitted not the daily sight of wounds and sores,
Afflictions and wretchedness of every kind,
To blunt the edge of his natural feelings
For the sufferings of his Fellow-creatures:
But, contemning a too hasty reliance on vaunted Theories,
Sparing of the Knife - abhorring unnecessary Torture...
A Foe to wanton, cruel, or dangerous Experiment...
Averse from rash Operation, and the destruction of parts, redeemable by patient and judicious care...

He erected for himself a high and distinguish'd Reputation,
On the solid, and only secure Basis of ENLIGHTENED EXPERIENCE:
Stimulated throughout Life by a wise and Christian-like Ambition.
To care, not maim - preserve, and not destroy.

Mankind is indebted to him for a more intimate acquaintance with the powers
OF MEDICAL ELECTRICITY;
By his own ingenious and improved applications of which,
he performed many remarkable and almost unhop'd for Cures,
But the Practice of COW-POXING, which first became general in his Day.

Undaunted by the overwhelming influence of Power and Prejudice,
And the voice of Nations,
He uniformly, and until Death, perseveringly opposed:
Conscientiously believing it to be a Public Infatuation,
Fraught with peril of the most mischievous consequences to Mankind...

Whether right or wrong, Time will most surely determine;
MAN’S MERE OPINION MUST EVER BE LIABLE TO ERROR,
BUT BY THE MOTIVES THAT SWAY HIS HEART, SHALL HE ALONE BE JUDGED.

To perpetuate the remembrance of Qualities so excellent,
PENELOPE BIRCH,
His affectionate and only surviving Sister,
Hath raised this Monument,
Not out of a worldly and vain-glorious
Pride of Affinity;
But, in order to hand down an Example worthy of Imitation,
To succeeding Ages.
